Obstacle To Service

The high cost of running for public office constitutes a weakness in our democracy which no one seems to know how to correct. Eight major candidates for governor of Texas spent a total of $3.1 million in the primary election and that figure is based on the official reports. Actual costs were probably a good deal higher. Six of the eight spent more than $1 a vote.

Until we figure out some way to limit these high campaign costs, or to limit the length of the campaign, or somehow to more equitably finance campaigns, many good men will continue to be lost to public service. The financial requirements for running for office are simply too high. - Houston (Tex.) Chronicle

No Escape

Americans are fond of quoting an old saw that goes "nothing is as certain as death and taxes." In these days of conglomerate mergers, it should come as no surprise that the Internal Revenue Service has joined the two inevitables.

The IRS has just issued a booklet, "Federal Tax Guide for Survivors, Executors and Administrators." Death, it would seem, opens the door of tax liability, requiring special returns by persons settling the dead person's estate, plus an obligation to pay taxes on income after death. And then there is the matter of estate taxes.

An IRS press release on the booklet is entitled "Death and Taxes" and promises a copy free to anyone who asks for it at the local IRS office. Now there's only one way a fellow who has wrangled with the IRS all his life is going to find any joy in dying: Leave the whole estate to a deserving enemy, such as the last IRS agent who audited him. - Tulsa (Okla.) Ex-president of Lebanon Shot 4 Times

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Camille Chamoun, the former president of Lebanon who called U.S. Marines into his country in 1958, was shot four times in the arms and face today by an assassin, but apparently escaped grave injury.

A 20-year-old youth, described as the gunman, was captured by Chamoun's bodyguard, witnesses reported. His motives were not clear, but an undetermined number of accomplices were said to have escaped down a maze of alleys near Chamoun's political headquarters.

Boy Swallows

Pet Turtle

BOUNTIFUL, Utah (AP) — Two-year-old Brad Haines may have to undergo surgery—to have a pet turtle removed.

Brad swallowed the turtle, Myrtle, earlier this week. X rays Wednesday showed it to be alive.

His mother, Mrs. Russell Haines, said X rays Thursday were unable to confirm if it was still alive, but a doctor had advised surgery if the turtle did not pass through the boy's system today.

At first, Brad just laughed and said, "It tickles." But now he has had "one too many X rays and one too many trips to the hospital," Mrs. Haines said, and he no longer laughs about it.

WESTMORELAND, Calif. (AP) — City Council members have voted unanimously to suspend their own salaries and those of part-time firemen for the next three months in an effort to balance city books. Mayor E. H. Cain said the city owes $3,000 in past due bills.

Majove Desert Might Give Evidence of the Earliest Western Man

YERMO, Calif. (AP) — Deep in the barren Mojave Desert, archaeologists say they think they've found the earliest evidence of man's presence in the Western Hemisphere.

Now, the painstaking task of proving their find faces a deadline—sundown tonight.

The work at the 5-acre diggings in the Calico Mountains, 10 miles east of Barstow, halted when Glen S. Gunn, a miner holding claims to the federally owned property, ordered the scientists off the land. Gunn values his claims at $25 million and has offered them to the scientists for that sum.

But the archaeologists say they'll resist his demand for them to leave the land.

"We've moved all specimens, all notes and records just in case we should have to grab our hats and run," said Ruth Simpson, expedition director. "But our plan is to stay on at the site despite Mr. Gunn's ultimatum." Their belief that stone-age relics found at the site, some 100 miles northeast of Los Angeles, is supported by Dr. Louis S. B. Leakey, who discovered, in Africa, the earliest known human remains, which may be as old as 1.3 million years.

Leakey has said the evidence gathered at the Yermo diggings, including more than 100 man-made tools, warrants continued research until the age of the relics is proved.

But Gunn said the presence of the researchers is keeping him from digging bentonite, a rare earth from volcanic ash, on claims he has held since the early 1950s.

At the request of the archaeologists, the Bureau of Land Management is assaying the deposits to determine whether the claims are worth mining. If they aren't, bureau officials say, the claims can be nullified.

Meetings have been proceeding for several days between representatives of the scientists, Gunn and his attorney seeking an arrangement which would enable the research to continue.

The original discovery which led to the dig, sponsored by the San Bernardino County Museum, was made in 1963 by Miss Simpson.

Alexander Opens His Campaign

OSCEOLA, Ark. (AP) — Bill Alexander of Osceola officially opened his campaign for Congress from the 1st District here Thursday and it was proclaimed "Bill Alexander Day" in Osceola.

Alexander told a group that civil disorder "must make us realize that patriotism is no longer a laughing matter." The crowd also heard from three Democratic gubernatorial candidates — Frank Whitbeck, Marion Crank and Ted Boswell. Three Democratic candidates for Lieutenant governor also were present — Gilbert Leigh of Little Rock, Julian James of Jonesboro and Bill Terndon of West Memphis.

Crank criticized the present administration's fiscal policy and said the people should know where present money was being spent before there should be a raise in taxes.

Boswell said that if in the primary "you don't elect a confident Democrat to oppose the Republican administration in the general election, then the primary could be considered an exercise in futility."

Whitbeck said Arkansas required "new leadership" to move ahead and he predicted the Democrats would recapture the governor's chair.

Whitbeck also criticized Rockefeller.

Defector Affirms Cong Propaganda

By BARRY KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

SAIGON (AP) — The second highest ranking Viet Cong ever to defect told a news conference today the enemy would keep up his attacks on South Vietnam's cities to improve North Vietnam's negotiating hand at the Paris talks.

Col. Phan Mau, 38, defected May 7 after his regiment got orders to fight in the second offensive this year against Saigon.

He said the current Communist strategy "consists of a very long schedule composed of many offensives... all aimed at supporting the talks being held in Paris."

"The presence of North Vietnamese troops in the South is clear to everyone," he said. But the denial of that at the Paris talks "has disadvantages."

"It creates disbelief among the rank and file of the Viet Cong and among the population of the North. They ask themselves if other things the party says are true or not."

Mau said the Viet Cong would continue to shell the cities of South Vietnam "to show their presence and to show the world that they are still strong."

Before the Tet offensive against Saigon and 35 other populated centers in February, Mau said, most rank and file Viet Cong troops believed the people would rise up to support them.

"After the offensive we didn't believe that any more," he said. "We didn't have the support of the population, and the allied forces were stronger."

Mau said he decided to defect because he felt his ambitions were not being fulfilled, he had disagreements with his superiors and he found the Communist dogma deceptive.

Integration Is Cure for Prejudice

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — No matter how prejudiced his parents may be, a white child may develop relatively free of racial prejudice if he gets into an integrated school system at the kindergarten level.

This is a major conclusion of an experiment conducted in Charlotte by Dr. Louis Diamant, chairman of the psychology department at the University of North Carolina's Charlotte campus.

Diamant used white-faced and black-faced dolls in the study of 60 children attending private kindergartens in lower, middle- and upper-middle-income neighborhoods of Charlotte, North Carolina has no public kindergarten system.

The children had IQs from 92 to 140.

The children were divided into two groups—one with white mother and father dolls and a white baby doll, the other with white mother and father dolls and black baby dolls.

Diamant found no significant difference between the two groups in the time the children took to decide that the dolls were father, mother and child in one family.

Top Official of Cong Joins Peace Talks

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
AP Special Correspondent

PARIS (AP) — The disclosure that Hanoi is sending one of its key officials to the U.S.-North Vietnamese peace talks has raised speculation that North Vietnam may be planning some tactical shift in its bargaining position.

A North Vietnamese spokesman said Friday that "one of our responsible people is coming to Paris." He was identified later as Le Duc Tho, a member of the central committee and politburo of the Communist party of North Vietnam.

Tho is viewed by U.S. experts on North Vietnam as an important member of the ruling group in Hanoi.

The talks between U.S. Ambassador W. Averell Harriman and Xuan Thuy of North Vietnam are in recess until Wednesday. Tho, who is probably traveling by way of Moscow as other members of the Hanoi delegation have done, presumably will be in Paris by that time.

Meanwhile Cyrus R. Vance, deputy to Harriman, is expected back here Sunday from Washington, where he reported to President Johnson on the talks. He left after the fifth meeting last Monday.

The questions about Tho's mission which interest U.S. officials here are whether he is bringing any new instructions to the North Vietnamese in the conference.

Friday's meeting, the sixth since the talks started three weeks ago, produced no movement toward agreement by either side.

U.S. spokesman William J. Jordan said, however, the meeting was marked by spontaneous discussion—slightly more informal talks and less speech-making. But the result was the same, he said, no action on de-escalating the war.

Another development which some Americans found slightly encouraging was that midway in their session of almost four hours, the two delegations took a refreshment break. They were served tea and soft drinks by the French staff at the International Conference Center.

This was the first time such a social touch had been injected. In their formal encounter across the conference table they continued to exchange proposals and counterproposals on the issue of reducing the level of conflict in Vietnam.

Thuy said that if Harriman persisted in demanding some concession from North Vietnam for ending all attacks on that country they would eventually put out a joint communique in which the U.S. would pledge to stop its attacks and North Vietnam would pledge to abstain from attacking the United States.

Harriman retorted that the suggestion was "fantastic." But he said it could be rewritten to deal with "real issues."

Board Warned of Lawsuits

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—John W. Walker, a Negro lawyer, told members of the Little Rock School Board Thursday that the board faced another lawsuit if it "persists" in operating all-Negro schools.

Walker said the U.S. Supreme Court's recent decision regarding the constitutionality of the freedom-of-choice plan, which the Little Rock District now uses, made a reassessment mandatory.

Walker made the statement during a discussion of the recurrent plan to build a track and field for Horace Mann High School on the grounds of Booker Junior High School. Both are now all-Negro schools.

20 Who Graduated at Fight Ranges Hope High 50 Years Ago to Hold Reunion in Center of Saigon

By MARY ANITA LASETER
Star Feature Writer

Fifty years ago the 29 graduating seniors at Hope High School were about to embark upon their separate life's journeys. In one week, 20 of those graduates will gather in Hope for a reunion on June 8. With luck, there will be 21 of them and several of their former teachers, too.

The year 1918 was a war year—the first World War—and the class experienced many difficulties preceding graduation. For instance, there were three superintendents or acting superintendents during this class' senior year, as Uncle Sam kept calling them into the armed forces. L.M. Goza was filling the position at the time of graduation, but he had to report soon afterwards.

Many of the boys in the class left school in a surge of patriotism and either joined the military or relieved someone else to serve by taking a civilian job. As a result there were only seven boys in the graduating class. The class colors? Red, white, and blue of course. The class motto? "Impossible is Un-American."

The class invitations read "Methodist Church," as the class had hoped to be the first to graduate from the (then) new Methodist Church. But, alas, the church was not completed in time, and the exercises were held at the Baptist Church. Dr. J.M. Workman (deceased), President of Henderson Brown College in Arkadelphia, was the speaker, and Dr. G.E. Cannon (deceased), President of the Hope School Board, presented the diplomas. Incidentally, 15 of the 29 graduates were honor students.

Class officers were: president, Paul Lewis; vice-president, Margaret Arnold; secretary-treasurer, Ada Huckabee. Five members of the class are deceased. They are: Margaret Arnold, Harry Bryant, Charles Mobley, Harry Queen, and Roy Stephenson. Also unaccounted for are Gussie McKean, Helen McKean, and Hazel Taylor. If anyone could help in locating these members, the class will appreciate it.

Those still living in Hope are: Mrs. Mary Pillow Black Johnson, Mrs. Kathleen Briant McLarty, Miss Mamie Bell Holt, Mrs. Halcyon Polk Sutton, Mrs. Florence Spragins Hyatt, Lloyd Coop, and Paul Lewis, former teachers of the class who reside in Hope are: Miss Josie Anderson, Miss Mable Eltridge, Mrs. N.W. Denney, and Miss Nannie Perkins.

Among those class members expected to attend from out-of-town are: Mrs. Marie LaGrone Gilliam, Mrs. Jewell Wynn Talle, Mrs. Lorene Winn Hall, Mrs. Anne Martindale Williams, Mrs. Ruth Weaver Griffith, Mrs. Ada Huckabee.

Coed Gives Up Home in Car

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Cherie Gordon's four-wheel bedroom has been beached and now she's living in a dormitory just like any other Sacramento State College coed.

The shapely 21-year-old physical education major drew nationwide attention after newsmen learned she was sacking out in a sleeping bag on the floor of her station wagon, "The Old Green Goose," to save money.

The chairman of the women's physical education department was not enthusiastic, however, and wrote Cherie a memo strongly hinting the faculty might not approve her teaching credentials unless she changed her ways.

Cherie says that even before the memorandum arrived she had given up sleeping in the station wagon and moved into the dorm.

Finds a 60 Year Old Flag

BERLIN, N.H. (AP) — Donat Letarte, renovating his kitchen on the holiday Thursday, tore down an old wall and found a neatly rolled American flag with 45 stars.

The stars indicated the flag was more than 60 years old. Utah was the 45th state admitted to the union in 1896. Oklahoma, the 46th, was admitted in 1907.

Jones, Mrs. Hertha Bowden Kleswetter, Mrs. Mary Carter Sole, Mrs. Doris Kennedy Brown, Mrs. Susie Roberts Shelton, Jim Murph, Mrs. Irene Bailey Harvey, and Mrs. Mozella Thompson Irwin.

Out-of-town former teachers expected include: Miss Edna Middlebrook, Mrs. Vance Crawford, Mrs. Ned Sayle, Duval Purkins, and Miss Nina Knighton.

Open House for class members will be held next Saturday morning at the home of Mrs. B. C. Hyatt, a tea for friends of the class Saturday afternoon at the Town and Country Restaurant, and a banquet that night for class members and faculty. Some will want to visit their classmates, Miss Holt, at the tavern in Washington, if time permits.

Those remaining over Sunday are invited to attend special services in their honor at the First Methodist Church at 10:50 a.m. This is where graduation exercises were originally scheduled for the class in 1918 before plans had to be changed. Looks like the class is going to be 50 years late to church!

After the Sunday morning service, a Dutch treat luncheon will be held at the Town and Country to round out the Golden Anniversary celebration of the Hope High School Class of 1918.

Steel Talks Seem to Be Progressing

By DOUG BAILEY
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A critical phase of the labor negotiations for the nation's basic steel industry is winding up this week, apparently giving bargain-hunters their best start in years for contract talks.

Because of an early start and a switch in format, thousands of local issues have been settled during six weeks of intensive plant and company bargaining.

Now labor and industry management teams will be able to start on the basic economic package in New York on Monday without many of the distractions that bottled up past negotiations.

"There's some real trail blazing going on," said a veteran official of the United Steelworkers of American headquarters team.

He said the decision to put the local negotiations first was unprecedented for the American labor movement as far as he knew. In the past, the industry-wide settlement was worked out first, then the local bargaining began, usually in the crisis atmosphere of an approaching strike deadline.

"This has given us an opportunity to get at the gut issues that used to get people all worked up," he said. As an example, he pointed to the rash of local walkouts that followed companywide settlements in the auto industry this year.

Labor and management, both anxious to avoid tempting government intervention with a strike during wartime and an election year, worked out the stepped-up timetable and the procedural change after a proposal for arbitration fell through.

Both sides say that nobody gains when the government steps into negotiations as it has 13 times in the 20 major steel settlements since 1937.

The contract for the 450,000 steelworkers expires Aug. 1. A strike has been predicted by many industry-related insiders, such as purchasing agents, Steel consumers have been stockpiling at record rates.

The number of local issues brought to the bargaining table by the 450,000 steelworkers was huge. One local in Ohio produced more than 4,000. Lists of 800 or more were common in the mills around Pittsburgh.

The rank and file wanted such things as a new parking lot, the washroom painted, brighter lights in the halls, a fulltime doctor, or incentive pay for janitors.

When they couldn't be settled at the plant level, negotiations that began in April were bucked to the company level this month.

SAIGON (AP) — About 30 or 40 Viet Cong held out in the heart of Saigon's Chinese section today against South Vietnamese troops and American recoilless rifles which blasted enemy-held buildings into rubble.

A somewhat larger force attacked when U.S. and South Vietnamese police shifts changed at 4 a.m. But some of the guerrillas slipped out when the government declared a 20-minute truce to allow several hundred refugees to flee the embattled five-block-square area in southwestern Saigon.

South Vietnamese warplanes attacked guerrillas menacing the opposite side of the capital. They bombed and strafed housing areas 2½ miles northeast of Saigon's center. Civilians had abandoned the area after the guerrillas moved in.

The enemy had made the deepest penetration into the city of their third wave of attacks on Saigon, which began last Saturday. The main battle area was about three miles west of the presidential palace and military reports said snipers had moved to within a mile of the palace.

Government troops reported killing 133 enemy soldiers in the last 24 hours in Saigon. Government losses were reported as 18 killed and 57 wounded.

American forces reported killing 58 enemy soldiers Friday in three battles within a 30-mile radius of Saigon. Seven Americans were killed and 41 wounded.

For the second time this week, North Vietnamese troops attacked U.S. Marine positions near Khe Sanh, the northwest frontier outpost that was under siege for 27 days earlier this year.

Striking in daylight, an unusual tactic, the North Vietnamese began with a heavy mortar attack, then advanced with small arms and grenades.

GI Convicted in Death of Vietnamese

By KEN RINGLE
Associated Press Writer

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — Marine Cpl. Stanley J. Luczko Jr., 22, has been convicted of voluntary manslaughter in the fatal shooting of an elderly Vietnamese woman while Luczko was on a patrol.

The eight-officer Marine court-martial which found Luczko guilty Thursday night meets today to set sentence. The maximum sentence would be 10 years at hard labor and a dishonorable discharge.

A Marine legal officer said the character references from Luczko's neighbors in Gardner, Mass., plus his "outstanding" service record could weigh heavily in Luczko's favor.

It was even possible, he said, that Luczko might walk free after a sentence equal to the 15 months he has spent in the Portsmouth, N.H., Naval Prison since his first trial where he was convicted of premeditated murder.

That trial, in Da Nang, Vietnam, led to a sentence of life imprisonment, but the conviction and sentence were overturned by a Navy Board of Review which found legal errors in the proceedings.

The woman, Nguyen Thi Co, was slain while Luczko was leading a combat patrol near Chu Lai on Sept. 22, 1966.

Formal testimony in the retrial wound up after Luczko took the stand to dispute prosecution testimony that he had slain her.

He denied statements from two members of that patrol who testified that Luczko speculated on the size hole a .45-caliber bullet would make in the woman, shot her through the forehead with his service automatic, then ordered another Marine to "finish her off."

Luczko admitted shooting at the woman, but said he did so as an "automatic reflex" after the woman suddenly squatted beside a haystack while he was questioning her and thrust her arm into the straw.

HUBERT H. HUMPHREY

After Hubert Horatio Humphrey graduated in 1929 as valedictorian of his high school class, he attended the University of Minnesota. Because of the Depression, he quit in his sophomore year to return to Wallace, S.D. (where he was born on May 27, 1911) and help in his father's drugstore.

Before returning in 1937 to complete his education, Humphrey married Muriel Buck on Sept. 3, 1936. By then he had obtained a license as a pharmacist from the Denver College of Pharmacy.

In 1939, he graduated magna cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa in political science, going on in 1940 to teach political science at Louisiana State University and obtain his Masters Degree.

Working in the WPA adult education field in Minneapolis in 1943, Humphrey ran for the office of Mayor and lost by 5,000 votes. Recognizing the splintered vote of two separate groups, he spent seven months putting together the Democrat-Farmer Labor Party which, in 1945, swept him into office and re-elected him in 1947.

At the 1948 Democratic National Convention, U.S. Senatorial candidate Humphrey led the successful fight for a strong civil rights plank which led to the Dixiecrat walk-out. Elected, he entered the Senate at the same time as Lyndon B. Johnson, who became a close friend.

Humphrey was Minnesota's favorite-son candidate for the presidency in 1952 and, four years later, was an active candidate for the vice-presidential nomination under Adlai Stevenson.

Announcing his candidacy for the presidency in 1960, Humphrey withdrew only after defeated by Sen. John Kennedy in the Wisconsin and West Virginia primaries. He then sought and won re-election to his Senate seat.

He was appointed Democratic assistant floor leader (party whip) in 1961 and, in 1964, President Lyndon Johnson selected him as vice-presidential running-mate on the Democratic ticket.

Since that success, he has represented the United States throughout the world while fulfilling the many duties assigned him by the President. The father of four children, Hubert Humphrey is now entered in a three-way race for the 1968 Democratic nomination for President of the United States.

Cuban Pays Off the Government

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A Cuban refugee has sent the U.S. government a check for $120 — "The total amount I received on my arrival in the United States."

The refugee, Enrique Saez, now living in Wilmington, Del., added in a letter to the government-operated Cuban Refugee Center: "Also, a coat given me when I resettled to the north has been donated to the Goodwill Industries here in Wilmington."

Refugee Center records show Saez arrived by boat at Key West, Fla., Dec. 21, 1962, at the age of 19.

The refugee wrote: "I arrived with only swimming trunks. Today I am a research engineer."

Youth Beat

THE NATIONAL REPORT ON WHAT'S HAPPENING

Hotline Hangups: Listening Service for teen-agers is latest counseling gimmick. Pilot program on West Coast is "open" from 6 p.m. to 12 p.m. daily and from 6 p.m. to 4 a.m. Fridays and Saturdays. Answering service has been swamped with calls. Truly a "listening" concept of hang-up therapy! Not authoritarian at all. Private citizens are volunteer "listeners." Problems range from drugs and the draft to pregnancy, venereal disease and racial dilemmas. Most are genuine and sincere. Put-ons are transparent. The phone corps plays along with the phony. Their reasoning: Underneath the insincerity there COULD be a real problem. "How to make friends" is a big subject for discourse. Existential-type anxiety calls are common. ("I don't know who I am or where I'm going!") Whole scene has merit galore.

PROTEST THE PROTEST: College students' protests may be losing their credibility. Academic freedom no longer the issue. Minorities are demanding the right to set themselves up as authorities on what is educationally permissible. Colleges and universities are not institutions for revolutionary social change any more than instruments for preservation of "the establishment." The university must encourage rational study—past, present and future. Some "protest" movements today are attempts to usurp the power of the faculty to establish the ground rules for preservation of academic freedom itself. Irresponsible protesters aren't helping the generation gap gap. Calmer, nonmilitant students are suffering and should launch their own counter-protests. Yet, student unrest should not be discounted by university administrators. Many concerned young men and women are seriously questioning their education's "relevance"—and may very well have a point.

ILL-WILL A TEEN MUST? Survey of 2,000 Midwest teens reveals interesting dimensions: (1) Hostility peaks out among normal boys in their sophomore year in high school. (2) Girls who have a hostility crisis usually work up a big hate at age 18. (3) Mothers of 13-year-old girls with hate hangups should feel lucky that the problem doesn't come along later.

Case Against Refined Sugar: Dental study of teens in Norway reveals startling drop in tooth decay during German occupation of 1940-45. Teens then needed only 20 per cent as much dental work as before and after the period. Sugar was severely rationed and frequently unobtainable. Further, Swiss studies of men who couldn't eat sugar because of an enzyme lack seem to confirm the cavity capacity of raw sugar.

FUZZY FUTURES: High-flying department and specialty stores pushing "custom facial fuzz" for men (?). Say: "Matches your hair color exactly. Available in any length or shape. Two weeks delivery." Price is $50 for sideburns. Twenty dollars for mustaches. Ad theme is, "We dare you." Next item: False hair for the chest?

Bearded Lions: Someone once said, "If you think to grow a beard is to acquire wisdom, a goat is at once a complete Plato." Beards have become a "badge of creativity." Trouble is, so many noncreative people are sporting them these days that the symbol has a hollow ring and look! Sideburns are taking up the slack with teen boys. Many high schools that town upon beards wearing and growing (contests) encourage sideburn competition. Warning to such "educators": Whippers have a creepy way about them. Today's sideburns are tomorrow's Van Dyke.

Nomenclature to Note: Torti (Tortoise) Turtle-neck. Sic: a tort shirt.

HELEN HELP US!

by Helen Bottel

YOUTH ASKED FOR IT!

This column is for young people, their problems and pleasures, their troubles and joys. As with the rest of Helen Help Us, it welcomes laughs but won't dodge a serious question with a brush off.

Send your teenage questions to YOUTH ASKED FOR IT, care of Helen Help Us | this newspaper.

P.T.B. IS DANGEROUS

Dear Helen: I've got a real weird problem. I'm getting hung on glue sniffing — otherwise known as PTB (Popping the Bag). I want to quit, but can't. My crowd and I started doing it just to see why the kooks get their kicks out of it. We found out it makes you feel kind of crazy like.

We don't think it is hurting us, but want to know for sure. One girl gets headaches about an hour afterwards, and another gets a sharp pain in her head. A guy goes sort of paranoid. I'm kinda dumb afterwards. I can't think, and feel like a vegetable.

Would you please tell us what harm there is in it? I read somewhere that they've taken out the stuff from airplane glue that ruins your liver and kidneys. — WORRIED P.T.B.

Dear Worried: Don't be too sure about that. There are many kinds of glue. While most are quite "safe" when used as intended, they can still be deadly dangerous to kids who pop the bag. Here's how:

1. Possible delayed liver and kidney damage — and this is permanent.

2. Threat of mental deterioration. Those headaches and "feeling like a vegetable" are warnings.

3. Decrease in white blood cell count, which leaves you open for infections. While laws governing the manufacture of glue have tightened, don't ever kid yourself that intensive inhalation, via P.T.B., isn't harmful.

4. Asphyxiation. If you pass out with a plastic bag over your face — you may be out for good.

5. Caught while under the influence, you face a misdemeanor charge at Juvy. (This is the law in your State — California.)

6. If you think you are "hung" on glue sniffing, then you've got a psychological problem and need professional help. Otherwise, you may go on to illegal drugs that put you even farther out of touch with the world. Anyone who repeatedly risks his health and future for a "high" is afraid of reality. He may end up as a real psycho.

7. As with marijuana, PTB usually slows down physical action while "disorienting the mind." But its effects are unpredictable. You may go paranoid, psychotic — get the feeling you can risk anything — all of which might lead to the morgue.

If these reasons don't persuade you to "kick the bag" then re-read Answer Number 6, and make an appointment with a doctor! — H.

Dear Helen: You said transcendental meditation was over your head. That reminds me of Alan King's remark: "Transcend" means "going above" and "dental" has something to do with teeth. So a guru is "talking over your head while putting the bite on you." N'est pas? IT IS WRITTEN

Dear Helen: We hope the war will soon be over, but we know the men will be in Vietnam a long time. Our club would like to send ing in the farmhouse nearby.

Since 1950 more than two million family farms have gone out of business so the number of Americans who can visit back at the old home place is diminishing. Farm-ranch vacations are nostalgic for those with roots in country places or as strange as the moon surface for those who have always lived with the throb of motors in their ears, 24 hours a day. For the latter, the silence can be a trifle scary for a few nights.

There's always fishing, swimming, riding and sightseeing. On working farms the guests are welcome to heave a hay fork and participate in the daily activities or they can loaf, read or listen to music.

It isn't the money. Rates are so low it's obvious that the farmers and ranchers are mostly in the business because they like company and the excitement the guests bring along.

If interested but timorous,
try this: Make a weekend visit during the spring or fall slack season for a sample of the life. The experience could well lead to comments like these from satisfied summer farmers:

"We greenhorns herded cattle but left gate open, so another 'roundup' next day."

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

There Are Many Reasons For Saving Your Teeth

By WILLIAM LAWRENCE, D.D.S.

DEAR DR. LAWRENCE: My teeth have always given me trouble. Every time I went to the dentist, he found new cavities and it cost me lots of money. About three years ago, I decided not to spend another cent on them and, when the time came, I'd have them pulled out and false teeth made. But now I'm not so sure about this, because I hear so many people complain about their dentures. What should I do?

ANSWER: Save your teeth. With the money it will cost you to have your teeth extracted and dentures made, you'll have enough to take care of your teeth for many years.

Save your teeth. It's a heck of a nuisance to wear full upper and lower dentures. Let's assume you are fortunate enough to get the perfect dentures: they fit precisely, they make you look like Liz Taylor and enable you to bite the heads off steel spikes.

There are no such perfect dentures. This doesn't mean that millions of people aren't getting on well with dentures. A cynical old professor once said that people will even get used to wearing clam shells.

Save your teeth. Even with so-called perfect dentures, patients must contend with: tremendous loss of chewing power (from 200 pounds per square inch to less than 50); more rapid changes in facial contours than occur in a natural aging process; removing teeth many times a day for cleaning and sometimes just for resting the tissue; not infrequent breakage, usually at awkward moments; and not infrequent pain.

Save your teeth. Dentures wobble and slide because they rest on soft tissue. They limit one's diet to denture-chewable foods. Many denture wearers claim they can eat anything. What they mean is that their desires in food have been limited by natural selection to what they can chew.

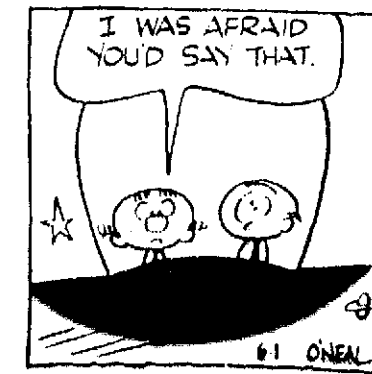

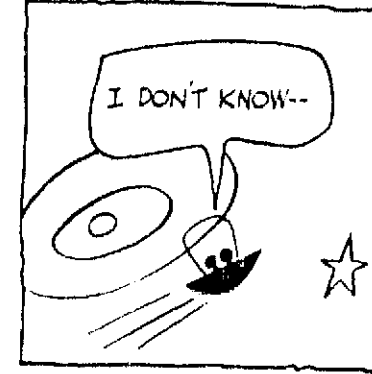

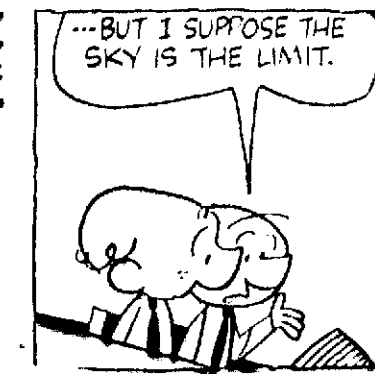

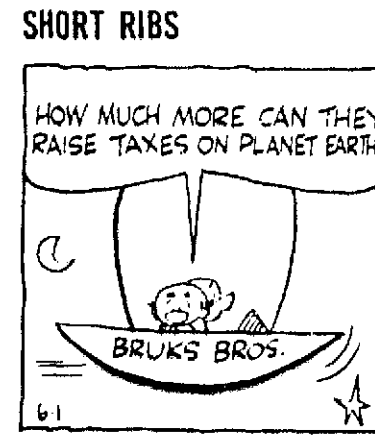

Save your teeth. If they loosen, periodontal treatment may save them; if they abcess, nerves can be removed and abscesses drained; if they break, they can be crowned; if they decay, they can be filled; if they're crooked, they can be straightened; if they discolor or are ugly looking, they can be capped.

We could discuss the bidding of today's hand for hours and still have more to say. South overbid a trifle when he pushed to the slam but we can't blame him much. Perhaps North should have bid three no-trump instead of three hearts. In that case South could have bid four no-trump as a no-trump raise instead of a Blackwood request for slam. The hand would have played at four no-trump and there would have been no column.

South looked over the dummy and saw that he needed the club finesse if he wanted to make six no-trump. Therefore he won the spade lead with dummy's ace and took that finesse. It worked and South was ready for the next step. He cashed a high club to see if the queen would drop. It didn't, so he went after hearts. There would always be time to get back to the clubs.

All this had taken enough time for East to visualize South's whole problem. East was sure that South held the king of spades. Obviously South was counting on three spades and two diamonds and would need seven tricks in hearts and clubs.

Assuming that South had 2-2-3-6 distribution it would be a give-up play for East to take his ace of hearts right away, so East ducked.

Of course, East had done all this thinking early. Had he gone into a deep trance before ducking South would have known where the ace was. South returned to his hand with the king of spades and led a second heart. East ducked for the second time and South had to think again.

A third heart lead would drop the ace but South could not see his opponents' hands. He decided that hearts would not break but clubs would, so he came to his hand with the king of diamonds, led out his last high club, and lost his slam.

Q—You, South, are dealer and hold:

What do you do?
A—Bid one club. You aren't quite strong enough to open with two but you do want to make a bid that is unlikely to be passed all around.

TODAY'S QUESTION

You bid one club and your partner responds one diamond. What do you do now?

Drysdale 'Springs' Back

By TOMMY THOMAS
NEA Sports Writer

Don Drysdale
"I've never deliberately hit a batter..."

CINCINNATI — (NEA) — It appears that Don Drysdale, the Los Angeles Dodgers' grand old man at 31, has been dunking his aging right arm in the Fountain of Youth. He recently tied a National League record by pitching four straight shutouts.

In 1956, at 19, Drysdale was the grand young man of the Brooklyn Dodgers. During these 12 years, Drysdale has often been in a whirlpool of controversy. His reputation as a fine pitcher has been aided (or impaired, according to one's taste) by his feared reputation as a brush-back artist. And, more recently, his publicized holdout with Sandy Koufax stirred the baseball waters.

Still a menacing figure at 6-6 and 220, some batters consider him a head-hunter. Willie Mays, one of the many who has been decked by Big Don, says, "You can't guess (about the pitch) with Drysdale if you want to stay healthy. He pitches you in and he pitches you out, and you got to be ready, man."

In 1961, Drysdale broke a 52-year-old record by hitting 20 National League batters with pitches.

"I've never deliberately hit a batter in my life," he said then and reiterates today. "I pitch 'em tight. Why should I alter my style when it's my bread and butter? While I don't try to hit anyone, I like to keep the batter off balance and let him know I'm out there. What do you want me to do, throw it down the pipe?"

The current Dodgers, who gave Don the sum of 15 runs in his 16 defeats last season, are not only no match for the rest of the NL clubs but also look out of place when compared to the line-up of sluggers that were Drysdale's teammates in Brooklyn.

"Occasionally, I think back to the guys we had at Ebbets Field—Duke Snider, Roy Campanella, Jackie Robinson, Furillo, Pee Wee and my old roommate, Gil Hodges."

What he won't say is that he wishes they were available for action at Dodger Stadium.

"Every pitch is important at each stage of a game," he says, "but they're not quite so crucial if you can afford to give up a home run occasionally and still be in front."

That's something Don Drysdale can no longer afford. Even in Los Angeles' pennant years, the club seldom scored over a couple runs a game for its superb pitchers.

Drysdale refuses to rap his hitters, however. He talks about how they're coming along and says the season is a long one and he's not afraid of any one team jumping into a big lead this year because of league balance.

The last of the boys from Brooklyn has probably played on his last pennant winner, unless a miracle happens. That's what Los Angeles, and Don Drysdale, the winningest pitcher in Dodger history, are hoping for.

By WM. T. McKEOWN
NEA Boating Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — When yachtsman Huckleberry Finn took up boat-camping, it rated as a rather rugged sport.

It still is, if you want to go by raft, or sleep on the floorboards of a rowboat. Recent improvements, however, are making it the fastest-growing of water sports, according to a survey by Mechanix Illustrated magazine. Boatbuilders have been suspecting this and are now turning out special models for boat campers.

The new boats are designed to remove some of the roughing-it while leaving all the fun. Latest addition to the line would have won quick approval from earlier campers like Marquette and Joliet, Lewis and Clark, and Huck and Tom Sawyer.

Built by the Glastron Boat Co. in Austin, Tex., the fiberglass 21-footer is called the Vagabond. Starting out as an open day boat, it can button up into a floating mobile home after the sun goes down.

A convertible top, twice the height of the windshield, goes up first. This provides what are dual luxuries for the average boatman—a chance to come in out of the rain and standing headroom under the top.

Side curtains zip around to completely enclose the Vagabond's cockpit. When only two campers are making the trip, they can slide into bunks that fit in a little cabin under the open cockpit foredeck.

More unusual is a drop gate in the stern. This hinges down to let a swimmer step out easily, or a skin diver climb back aboard without having to haul himself up over the side. Steps are molded into the transom door, and some owners are already scheming offshore cruises where they hope for fish that will have to be dragged aboard through this handy back door.

Another gate, this one in the middle of the windshield, lets fishermen move up to the foredeck for easier casting. Seats in the main cockpit stretch out to make two additional bunks at night or even for a quiet afternoon at anchor.

The hull carrying all these camping refinements, however, is the same one originally designed for rough-water marathons. Glastron President Bob Hammond became a successful racing driver while testing ways to get a soft ride and still go fast when the waves get big and hard.

Several Vagabond owners report living aboard, camp-trailer style, by pulling into roadside camping areas on the way to distant launching sites and pitching tent by simply putting up the top and crawling in.

Mark Twain might scoff, but probably with jealousy. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

Ground-oriented friend says that taking a train is the only way to fly.

Which is a reminder that you can still take the train, and, judging by the service on some roads, that's exactly what the management wishes you would do.

Nostalgia is one part recollection and two parts wishful thinking.

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

THE VAGABOND is a new 21-footer designed for campers. The tall gate tilts to let a diver, swimmer or big fish slide aboard. Once in the cockpit, the camp crew has standing headroom under the convertible top, plus bunks for four and space for more, and an added open cockpit ahead of the windshield, over the cabin.

Pro Career Looks 'Rosie' to Casals

By TOMMY THOMAS
NEA Sports Writer

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Rosemary Casals thinks short people make the best athletes but it's lucky for her she chose tennis nets rather than volleyball nets to contend with.

The 19-year-old San Franciscan, who sports a pixie haircut, is not only the youngest member of the National Tennis League but also the shortest.

"I'm 5-2 1/2," she says proudly. "I don't think it's a disadvantage because I'm closer to the ground and more coordinated than most players. Though I have more ground to cover, I can get there quicker."

Rosie recently turned professional along with Billie Jean King, Ann Haydon Jones and Francoise Durr. While she has won the Wimbledon doubles title with Billie Jean, Rosie has yet to win a Wimbledon or Nationals singles championship. If she had remained an amateur, she would have had a crack at being the top-rated female in that division. But she feels she has already benefited as much as possible from amateur competition.

"I wanted to get experience against pro competition," she says, "and with the tournaments turning to open tennis, I'll still have a chance to win the major ones. This way, I can have the above-board reputation of being paid as a pro and still have a chance to win the Nationals and at Wimbledon. As for my age, I've still had two years of international competition, so I feel I'm qualified to play with the pros."

Like most successful tennis players, Rosie feels she owes something to the sport and hopes to help pave the way for others.

"I would like to play about five more years," she says, "but I may be married by that time. After I quit, I would like to help encourage tennis players in my home town."

The Sane Flake

BALTIMORE, Md. — (NEA) — The Baltimore Orioles used to have a zany flake of an outfielder who one midnight inveigled five teammates to drive 30 miles down the pike to a place that had "30 different, exotic flavors of ice cream." And then he ordered vanilla.

Now they just have Curt Blefary. He's a sane flake. Although that's now debatable because he goes around almost half the time with a steel cage covering his face.

Curt, who was the 1965 Rookie of the Year in the American League as an outfielder and a productive hitter in the same role ever since, has become a part-time catcher this season. Manager Hank Bauer expects him to work behind the plate 75 or 80 games.

When Bauer broached the subject to Blefary in spring training ("To get more bat back there," explains Hank), Curt told him simply, "If you got the guts to put me back there, I got the guts to go back there."

Curt Blefary and Hank Bauer

"If you got the guts . . . I got the guts . . ."

It wasn't like asking Raquel Welch to play Lady Macbeth. The New York Yankees originally signed Blefary as a combination catcher-first baseman. As Curt remembers it, when he got to his first assignment, Greensboro, the team already had an all-star catcher who was batting over .300. "It didn't," he says, "make much sense to put me back there."

That's a fairly sage observation from a guy who has been known on the Orioles as "Cuckoo." Why that name?

"Because I'm nuts," he explains curtly.

Until this season, he has been primarily an outfielder all his professional life. Last summer, he had the perspicacity to buy two catcher's gloves. Well, actually, he didn't violate the ballplayers' code—he let his glove company give him one and purchased the other wholesale.

This spring he finally got to use them. Blefary has played in every Oriole game, commuting between the outfield and the catcher's squat.

"It's hell," he grumbled, "on my throwing." Still, he threw out seven of the first nine men who tried to steal base on him.

"A blind pig," he murmured modestly, "has got to find an acorn in a trough."

His spring was also enlivened by the gift of a monkey from a Baltimore fan. Curt received it the day before he worked behind the plate for Tommy Phoebus' no-hit game against the Boston Red Sox. He had the problem of naming the monkey and entertained suggestions from fans.

One suggested "Zero" to commemorate the Phoebus achievement, which Blefary called the greatest thrill of his baseball career. Another mentioned "Oodles." The most logical name carried an explanatory note.

"Call him 'Nephew,'" volunteered the writer. "Then you can be a monkey's uncle."

The dilemma didn't last long. Curt went on a road trip, leaving the monkey in charge of the clubhouse boy. While he was gone, the monkey died. The clubhouse boy met him at the plane with the sad news.

"You win some," said Curt, "and you lose some."

Actually, Curt is an emotional young man (not yet 25) who plays baseball with zest, if not finesse. To the Orioles, he's also known as "Clank"—another way of saying he wears an iron glove in the outfield.

The team bus took the players past a scrap iron pile one day. "Go get yourself another glove," advised Frank Robinson.

No one kids him, however, about the fact that he's capable of contributing 25 homers and 75 runs batted in each season. And you can't say he's not astute. Curt needs 38 units for a degree from Wagner College. But playing for the Orioles raises hell with his schooling.

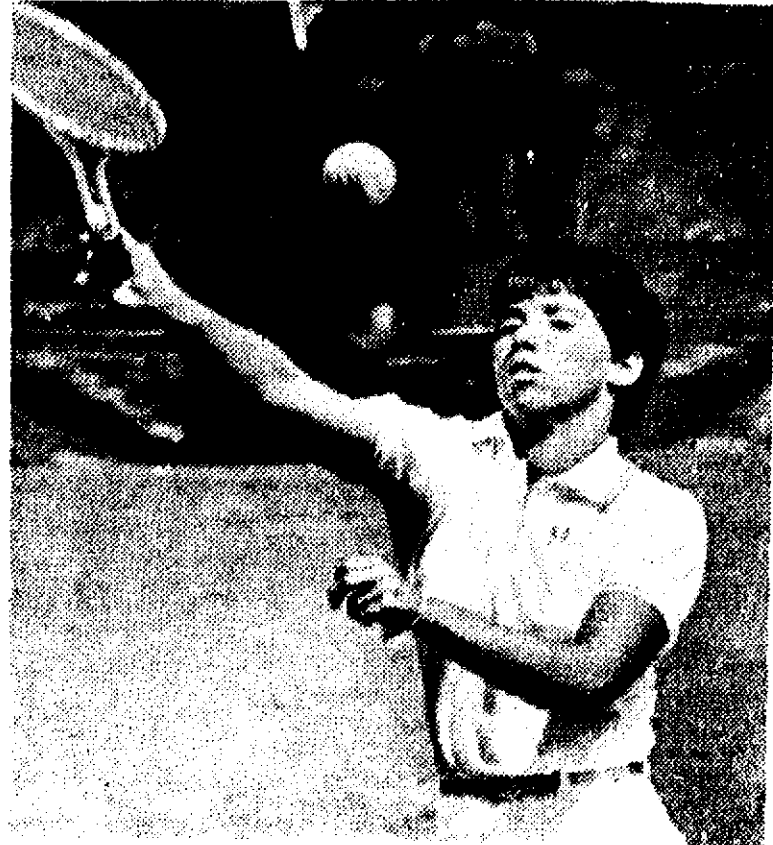

"After the World Series in '66," he said, "I enrolled six weeks late. Two weeks later, boom, I had to take mid-term exams. I flunked all of them."

It hurt the New York Yankees more than it did Curt. Under the terms of his original bonus, they're still paying for his education, and are obligated for five more years.

Some flake.

Harness All His Power

By FRANK FICK

AP Newfeatures Sports Editor

After eight seasons in the majors, massive Frank Howard is learning to overcome the handicap of having the biggest strike zone in baseball. He's thinking positive and now he is one of the most feared hitters in baseball.

"Most pitchers have good control but they make enough mistakes so I can make a living," says the Washington Senator left fielder.

The 6-foot-7 giant of 31 summers (twisted a knee last July and says he labored the last half of the year. It might have been the tipoff on Howard because in the final two months of 1967 he hit .291. He looked like he was starting to put everything together.

"Everything" for Howard would mean hitting .296, driving in 119 runs and smashing 36 home runs this season. These are Howard's high marks but never until this spring has he looked so good at the plate.

After his first 23 games he was up with the slugging leaders and batting .321.

"I'll be glad to play 160 games," says the 260-pound Hondo. "A good year for me would mean hitting 35 homers, driving in 100 runs and hitting at least .275. (His career batting average is .269).

"I'm improving defensively in left field and this ought to keep me in the game during the late innings which means I should get more at bats. I'd like to go to the plate 600 times this season."

"That's a figure I've never been able to reach since I came up with the Dodgers in 1960."

The amazing thing about Howard is that he was the fifth best slugger in the American League last season despite a low average and high number of strikeouts.

He batted only .256 and struck out 155 times.

However, as a slugger Hondo trailed only Carl Yastrzemski, Frank Robinson, Harmon Killebrew and Al Kaline. No wonder he held out for more money this spring. Howard's near the $50,000 salary bracket.

Howard reached his home run high last year with 36 four baggers and credits Gil Hodges, who left DC Stadium to lead the Mets, with doubling his home run output of the previous season.

"Gil got me to spread my stance more to keep me from overstriding," says Howard. "It also helped me to keep my head real still. His idea has paid off."

Howard, who used to swing in the batting cages at Vero Beach as though he were trying to drive machine-pitched baseballs through the netting, might still be a Los Angeles Dodger but for a spring argument with Dodger skipper Walter Alston.

One day Alston left Howard back at the training camp while the main squad went to Florida's west coast. Howard didn't like that. And Alston didn't like what Howard said.

So the Dodgers, who paid a $108,000 bonus to the former Ohio State basketball star, traded him to Washington in a seven player deal that sent pitcher Claude Osteen to California. That was after the 1964 season.

In 1962 Howard drove in 119 runs on 31 homers and a .296 batting average. He scored 80 times that year for the Dodgers. He reached only one of those figures after Hodges widened his stance. He hit 36 homers last year.

No man in baseball hits a ball any harder or as far as Howard. When Cub manager Leo Durocher coached third base for the Dodgers his favorite spot whenever Howard came to bat was outside the coaching box toward left field.

"He used to hit some terrific shots down that way and I wasn't about to get skulled by one of them," Durocher says now.

DeGaulle Met With Leaders of Military

BONN, Germany (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle paid a secret visit Wednesday to Baden-Baden, site of the French military headquarters in West Germany, the West German government said today.

A government spokesman, Guenther Diehl, reported the French chief of state dropped in at the airport of Baden-Baden. Diehl did not say whom De Gaulle met, but said it was likely under military protocol that he was greeted by Gen. Jacques Massu, commander of the 60,000 French troops in West Germany.

The French president had dropped out of sight for a while that day after taking off for a helicopter flight from Paris to his home in eastern France, Colombey-les-deux-Eglises. A direct flight on the 150-mile route would have taken less than two hours. He took about eight hours.

SCHOOLED in entertaining visitors at a California marineland, these porpoises maintain perfect formation in a spectacular leap.
